WE NOMINATE

Joseph John Redding, newly inducted president of the civic-minded Princeton Lions Club, a member of the Borough Council and for a quarter of a century a Princeton businessman. The descendant of a three-generation old Princeton family, that moved here "some time after the Civil War", Redding at 48, one of the most respected and most popular figures in community public life, describes himself as "only a hard-working guy who manages to keep busy around town" and considers himself a "bum politician who doesn't know enough not to speak my own mind."

Completing one year of high school and going to work in his mid-teens, Redding combined full-time jobs with self-education. He left Princeton in 1917, to learn his trade the hard way, working in Pennsylvania, Delaware and New York, and studying industrial arts courses wherever he chanced to be. He returned to the Borough in 1921 to help his father establish the plumbing concern of J. B. Redding and Sons and a year later married the former Theresa Mulvaney, of Mechanicsville, N. Y.

Active in the affairs of St. Paul's Roman Catholic Church and a Democratic County Committeeman, Redding first entered the political arena in 1939 as a candidate for the Borough Council. "Was I shellacked" is his one recollection of that initial political venture. He bounced back in 1945, winging to victory with his Democratic running-mates, in the teeth of a Republican tide.

Having served as Assistant Chief of the Princeton-Princeton-Township Police Reserve during World War II, he was well qualified to become Borough Police Commissioner upon assuming his elective office early this year. In addition to giving of himself to the Council, he is also a trustee of the Princeton Hospital and a New Jersey-appointed Business Counselor, helping returned servicemen make judicious use of the GI Bill of Rights.

For displaying in whatever he undertakes the kind of friendly understanding that makes life a bit more pleasant for everyone concerned; for thinking, before acting, when it comes to making decisions affecting this municipality; for typifying the qualities of character, leadership and devotion to duty that are the hallmark of the well-rounded American citizen; he is TOWN TOPICS' candidate for Militant Marketers. "If prices become exorbitant, we will stop buying . . . inflation will be disastrous not only to consumers but to merchants alike." So goes the letter drawn up by Princeton housewives to be sent to every store in town as this community and the nation at large finds itself without price ceilings in a time of acute shortages.

A three-point program to hold the line has been devised: non-essential buying at exorbitant prices will be discouraged; an information center (possibly at 130 Nassau Street) will be established to quote the last OPA prices; the names of merchants aiding in the campaign will be publicized. Within a week, a public meeting is planned to enlist community-wide cooperation.

Less than 24 hours after federal controls had expired, Princeton housewives had rushed in where Congress feared to tread. A committee headed by Mrs. Robert C. McManus, Service League president, was quickly created to contact merchants in all fields.

Other officers are Mrs. T. Ledyard Blakeman and Mrs. Frank T. Birch, vice-chairmen; Mrs. Thomas R. P. Alsop, treasurer; and Mrs. Alan C. Poole, secretary. The name: Militant Marketers.

At press time, names were being added to the committee and enthusiasm was widespread. Acceptances were on hand from Mrs. Winfield W. Riefler, Mrs. Kenneth W. Cooper, Sister Mary Ann, Mrs. Geneva Briscoe, Mrs. William A. Brearley, Mrs. Daniel Sayre, Mrs. Marquand Forsyth, Mrs. Minot C. Morgan, Jr., Mrs. Arthur L. Kinsolving, Mrs. James S. Brown, Mrs. Lynn H. Corson, Mrs. Thomas C. Parker.

Desks are expected to crop up along Nassau Street sidewalks, to give every housewife an opportunity to put her assent in writing. As the move gathered momentum, however, it was obvious that moral suasion was the Militant Marketers' best approach, that a community-wide buyers' strike against any commodity would be hard to organize even in well organized Princeton.

Although a survey in the first two or three days following the OPA death knell in the nation's capital was impossible to conduct here, it seemed likely that food prices would be first

It's New to Us

Original Water Colors. The University campus, that never-failing source of inspiration to artists of all kinds, has been depicted once again and more beautifully than ever. The creator of these lovely water colors is Julian E. Garnsey, the well-known painter and architect, who prefers to call himself a "colorist".

It is easy to understand why, if one has seen either the color scheme at the World's Fair, which was planned by Mr. Garnsey, or these water colors, which are obviously painted by a man with a true and artistic eye for all the possibilities of color. His skill as a draftsman and architect is easily discernible in the perfectly scaled detail of each of the buildings which he has chosen to portray. For collectors of Princetoniana or attractive paintings by famous artists, we suggest a visit to The Little Gallery on Palmer Square.

Midriff Playsuits. Too often we find the imagination of clothes designers neglecting that group of young girls who wear sizes seven to fourteen, but The Little Clothesline on Palmer Square has gone a long way toward making up for that oversight. These midriff playsuits are something new and gay and sufficiently decorous with their short, tied-in-front jackets to wear in eminently respectable company.

They come in six cheery colors, each with a touch of contrasting embroidery on the top and shorts pockets, for only $4.95. Playtime in the sun will have added joy for your daughter if she is sporting one of these cool well-cut and attractive playsuits.

Nylon Paint Brushes. Once again it's nylon to the fore, this time as an improvement over even the finest hog bristle brush. "The brush with the permanent wave" has been designed to spread more paint than any other type, with a series of crimps that provides to rise, that others would, at the outset anyway, hesitate. State action froze rents for 30 days.

Meats and dairy products were expected to go up fastest and farthest. Some restaurant prices were higher by Monday noon. The inflation spiral was in no wise hindered by an increase in hourly wages in the building trades here, and by reported operation of at least one large contractor on a nine-hour day, giving his men daily wages of $18.75.

Like the rest of the U.S., Princetonians could not do much more than hold their breath and their pocketbooks and look to Washington. But what little might be accomplished locally, they had set out in jig time to do.

Taxis vs. Jeeps. That rumbling sound is the running comment of various taxi drivers on the fortnight-old subject of the Tiger Jeeps which were in operation here over reunion weekend. Student-driven, they were licensed under State Motor Vehicle regulations after the Borough Council had refused them permission to operate as taxis.

But the council caught the protests of many a regular taxi owner, may hear more about it at its meeting Tuesday night. Mayor Morgan isn't disposed to devote much time to a discussion of the subject in council meeting, since the question of violation of the jeeps' rights can only be settled in recorder's court. Little or nothing that has been said or written, however, has cooled off the taxi drivers' feelings on the matter.

A Hunch That Hit. One of the better post-reunion stories concerns the introduction of Alumnus Edward Koos to

News of the Theatres

The Playhouse

Without Reservations (Friday, Saturday) places Claudette Colbert and John Wayne squarely in the middle of a series of comedy-adventures as they move westward on a transcontinental trip to Hollywood. Dangerously superficial on several occasions, the humor is kept worthwhile by gay, bantering dialogue between the capable principals.

A Stolen Life (Sunday through Wednesday) pictures Bette Davis in the role of twins (one good, one bad), with the former falling in love with Glenn Ford and the latter stealing him away. Not even the melodrama of a spectacular storm, which helps solve the plot, can rescue the story from doldrums. Miss Davis' fine acting is a redeeming feature.

The Diary of a Chambermaid (Thursday, Friday, Saturday) proffers Paulette Goddard, Francis Lederer and Burgess Meredith in a 19th century French setting which its producers hoped would be both racy and amusing. Because the story is uneven and melodrama fast replaces humor, it is neither. The lighter moments are better than the violent, improbable ending.

The Garden

Janie Gets Married (Friday, Saturday). This sequel to the Hollywood version of the play, "Janie," is farcial and occasionally silly as marriage comes to the girl in the title role. Juvenile members of the audience may enjoy the troubles Joan Leslie and Robert Hutton encounter, but the story seems a bit played out.

She Wrote the Book (Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday). Joan Davis fans will like this light if implausible comedy about an inhibited calculus professor who incurs amnesia and assumes the life of a sophisticated woman of the world whose colorful autobiography is constantly being banned.

The Runaround (Thursday, Friday, Saturday) is a piece of hit-or-miss slapstick whose cast would have trouble outlining the plot about a detective and a man-hunting woman. Ella Raines, Broderick Crawford and Frank McHugh are the main trio.

more open spaces scientifically placed to give the brush best possible pick-up. Added to that good reason for giving nylon in this new form a try is the fact that these brushes last much longer and are less expensive than pure bristle brushes. If you have been putting off that much-needed paint job because you are through with brushes that shed hairs all over your otherwise superior work, you can plan to go happily ahead with it after buying one of these nylon brushes at Morris Maple's on Nassau Street.

Post-War Picnics. Those delightful side trips for picnics, which might have been as far away from home as the back yard or the beach, were sharply curtailed during the war when picnic-charcoal became so hard to buy. This weekend, for the first time in years, it's available again—through J. W. Miller's Sons on Alexander Street. Four and ten pound bags, reasonably priced, will once again make this aspect of picnicking a pleasant, aromatic chore.

ADVICE TO DIABETICS

● Beware of patent medicines advertised as cures or remedies for diabetes! They often are not reliable. Diabetes was first recognized about 1552 B.C. This was about the time of Moses, or 200 years before the birth of King Tut. Ever since that time, at intervals, some faker comes up with a cure. A dependable treatment for diabetes was discovered only twenty years ago. It will not cure the disease, but it will enable the diabetic to live a normal life. The discovery is known as Insulin. Your doctor knows all about it. If he finds it necessary in your case, we can supply it in just the right strength.

that great American custom, playing the daily double. Mr. Koos was persuaded by friends to accompany them to the Monmouth Park race track near Freehold the afternoon reunions began.

A hasty explanation of the mechanics of the daily double was furnished him as the group arrived at the track. Being a member of the class of '38, he took those figures as his hunch. When the third entry in the first race and the eighth entry in the second both finished first as a combined 56-to-1 shot, Neophyte Koos collected $112 for the $2 he had bet to please his friends.
